This book contains an account, in detail, of all the arts employed by the fashionable ladies of all the chief cities of Europe, curiosity as a piece of art itself, for the most delicate subjects are handled with a skill, and an unexceptional propriety of language, which is really surprising.

This work is also full of the curious and useful recipes used by the beauties of Europe, and will enable our ladies to supply their

"This is a work of masteriy power and intense interest. Its opening passages abound with the imagery of an epic poem. The minding us of Milton's grand conceptions. The leading character is a splendid ideal, the scenes and phases of whose career, are depicted with surprising ability and analytic skill; while those of the heroine of the narrative are portrayed with marvelous power and scenic effect. The whole work is eminently dramatic in its plot, classical and elevated in its diction, and exemplary in its moral tone. We have not had a production for a long time, so original ints cast, so splitt-stirring and novel in its development, and so brilliant in its style. It cannot fail of arresting the attention of the public in an unusual descree; for, sithough not of the same class, it is no less fresh and exciting in its character than the world-renowned Bronte novels."

"A. S. Roe, author of 'A Long Look Ahead' and 'The Star and the Cloud,' is a fetton writer whose works may be safely commended. In the charm of simplicity and naturalness, and in power, he ranks far, far above the common rabble of novel writers; and, if we mady make such a conclusion from the two works of his which we have read, he has not published 'one line which dying he would wish to bit." It is not impossible that this author's rather peculiar novels may yet become a school by themselves, which will find insitators. They are unique, full of human nature, and, what is remarkable in a writer, each one scens to be an improvement upon the previous one."

"Mr. Roe evidently knows how to touch the heartstring; indeed, he sweeps them with a meater hand. At one time we find impossible to restrain the gualing tear, at another every risible nerve is in full exercise."
